THE SECOND COMING OF JOAN OF ARC

A PLAY BY CAROLYN GAGE

PERFORMED BY JOYCE HENDERSON

The story of Joan of Arc has been told in many ways, portraying her as a heretic, a witch, a romantic heroine or as a shrewd soldier and deeply religious woman, depending on the author. In lesbian playwright Carolyn Gage's The Second Coming of Joan of Arc, Joan is back to tell her own story, to "put my life in the main text." As the play unfolds, you will be treated to a first person account of the life of a young woman who rejects the acceptable options open to her and strokes out on her own, following her own imagination (the "voices").

In doing so, she encounters a great deal of resistance and violence from individual men trying to preserve male supremacy by punishing her for her nonconformity. In Joan of Arc, Gage shows how little the system of oppression has changed, drawing a startling parallel between Joan's struggle for identity and the issues facing young women today in our homophobic, sexist culture. As the play begins, Joan announces, "My story is the story of all women, and my suffering is identical to yours."

Join us for this humorous, profound, poignant and uplifting play.

From the Steering Committee

It's like a gift wrapped up so you can't see what is inside. Then when you take the time to open it, it's a surprise. It could be what you guessed, because of the outline of the box, but it could be something totally unexpected, like a beautiful ring in an umbrella box. Meeting new people is a lot like getting a gift.

SACWN was founded more than eleven years ago, because lesbians wanted to meet other lesbians, buy services from them, and know who was in "the community". By coming together in SACWN, it was possible to cut through the isolation and create an image of community.

Do we still need to feel a part of a community of lesbians? Many of us do. One of the most frequently noted answers on the recent survey of SACWN members was people join SACWN to be part of a "lesbian community." Sadly, it was frequently noted that that hope was not met.

Are we cliquish or shy? Do we stick to those we know so that an offer of friendship is not perceived as a pick-up? Do we lack the basic skills to socialize in a roomful of people? Why can't we be friendly? Must we carry the weight and anger of the world on our shoulders even when we come to SACWN? Do we think we have nothing to gain from meeting someone new?

It is not always obvious (like the wrapped gift) how a new contact will benefit our lives. We all have had the experience when someone we just talked to, had the right information or advice that made our next task easier. We need to be open to creating mutually beneficial relationships, especially in our community. Examine the wind blowing from the far right in the political environment today. We must be prepared, should the mood of the country become even more conservatism, to turn to our relationships with each other for support, cooperation and validity.

Today, even more than eleven years ago, there is a reason to network, to know each other, to be able to turn to each other, to be able to be there for each other. Today, we are much more aware of all that we have to lose.

Certainly, we will be selective in expanding our personal network. We will decide if we want to cultivate a relationship with the people we meet through SACWN. If there is common interest, we will build trust and credibility with each other. We will spend time listening and understanding who they are and equally share of ourselves. Networking and relationship building is based on the ability to take responsibility to build value with each other.

As lesbians, we have had a "world wide web", long before the Internet. Our world wide web has been made up of our interwoven networks of women who know each other and share their friends, contacts and resources with each other. We must continue to strengthen and expand our web. It may someday provide the life support that only we can extend to each other.

SACWNites Linda, Yvonne and Renee have volunteered to be greeters during the networking hour before our March event. They will be "web-building". Please extend a friendly smile to them and support their belief that we each have a gift to share. Call SACWN at 451-8034 to sign up as a web building greeter for the March and April event.

The Second Coming of Joan of Arc by playwright Carolyn Gage

Join us to celebrate Women's Herstory Month with the story of a woman successful in battle but betrayed by her country as we present a one woman performance by actress Joyce Henderson in a humorous, engaging and thoughtful play.

Writer Carolyn Gage, says about her play, "this Joan, like the historical one, is a teenager, a runaway from an alcoholic home with an incestuous father, a girl with severe eating disorders, and a lesbian." Gage portrays Joan as "the cross-dressing butch with the smart mouth, the angry young woman."

Gage is a radical lesbian-feminist playwright and director and the recipient of numerous literary fellowships, most notable the Oregon Book Awards, the state's most prestigious. From 1989 to 1991 she was artistic director of No to Men, a radical lesbian theater company in Ashland, Oregon. In two years, it produced 19 plays, including ten one-acts, two musicals and a one-woman show, all by Gage. Gage has performed The Second Coming of Joan of Arc on national tour.

Joyce Henderson will portray Joan of Arc. Joyce teaches theater classes and directs productions at Butte College in Chico. She is a founding member of Chico Independent Artists. Her adaptation of It's a Wonderful Life received an ANNIE for Most Innovative Production in Chico.

Joyce's background includes stage and film work in Los Angeles and San Francisco where she studied with Jean Shelton, Stella Adler, Robert Cohn and the Royal Shakespear Company.

SUCCESSFUL SACWNITE

This month's Successful SACWNite, Karen House, was born in Souix City, Iowa. Her mom was living at the time with her paternal grandmother while her dad was in a German war camp. He had been shot down two days before Karen was born.

Karen spent her earliest childhood in LA where her mom's parents lived at the time. After getting her bachelors of arts degree from CSUS in parks and recreation studies, Karen worked for the Sacramento Camp Fire Girls for a few years.

"Then I went to Europe to work for the US Army Special Services. We handled all of the entertainment such as the USO shows and I spent three years as a service club director in Germany. It was a very special time for me. My dad came over to Germany and we visited the camp where he had been held prisoner and followed the trail of his forced march. He was able to learn that the German's weren't his enemy. My mom also made a trip to visit me and I remember that time as a special time of strong connections to my family."

"When I came back to the United States, I applied for graduate school and went to the University of Oregon to earn a masters degree in parks and recreation management with a specialization in camp administration." Karen then settled in Portland Oregon for twenty-four years.

"First I got a job with the Portland Camp Fire Council as Director of Camping. With a staff of 75, I directed the largest girl's camp in the area. I supervised five day camp directors, hired the staff to run the aquatics camp and handled all of the administrative and financial responsibilities involved with the camps for ten year. This was the job that built my self esteem and taught me to be assertive. During this period, I served on the national Board of Directors of the American Camping Association and was president of the local Oregon Trail Camping Association. I was selected to be on the rule writing committee to write the health and safety regulations for the Department of Health in Oregon. All camps in the state must now be licensed under those requirements."

Karen always knew she was different. "I remember telling my mother when I was about five years old that I wasn't getting married and I was not having children. I went through the usual infatuations with teachers and then in my last year in high school, I identified to myself that I am a lesbian."

Karen tried a number of careers in Portland. She managed a cross country ski shop, ran the programs at the children's zoo for three years and was a resource instructor at an outdoor school. Then she was hired by Central City Concern, a program that rehabilitates hotels and rents them to people with addition and mental health problems. As an outreach worker, she drove a van and picked up intoxicated individuals and transported them to a detox center. "I was sent on calls that came into the 911 switchboard. During that time I was certified as an Emergency Medical Technician and deputized by the sheriff's department so I could transport individuals who resisted." After four years, Karen felt it was time for change.

"A relationship came to an end and I decided I needed a change of scenery. My parents were getting older and needed my assistance more so I moved to Sacramento to be closer to them."

Karen was recently hired as part of a new program sponsored by the Downtown Partnership called the Community Service Guide Program. "Sacramento is only the sixth city in the country to have this type of program. We are walking information booths and we act as the eyes and ears for the police. I like talking and helping people. I'm out of doors much of the time, walking from old Sac to 16th street, from L to I streets. Walking for a ten hour shift can be challenging. We keep groups of kids that loiter in front of businesses moving and answer questions that folks have. The most frequently asked questions are, of course, where's a good place to eat, where's a bathroom and how do I get out of here?"

Karen is single and shy. "I've been lucky. I've usually been pursued by wonderful women!" What does she notice first in a woman? "Their personality, friendliness and warmth."

Success to Karen is doing a good job at whatever it is you are doing. "I think success is a personal sense of knowing that you've done the best you can do."

JUST A TYPICAL SACWN EVENT...

The Valentine Dance got off to a great start thanks to the talented performers in the band called, The Heartbeats and Friends. Everyone seemed to enjoy the variety of the songs and the romance of the evening.

But the evening took a bizare turn when the bathroom fixtures started to back-up. At first it was easy enough to divert dancers to the bathroom in the back of the building, and then when that room began to fail, to the building across the patio. But when the sewage backed up into the reception area, forced the closure of the bar and came inches from the dancefloor, the dance had to be ended because of health and safety concerns. So at 11:15 PM, at the end of the thrid set by the band, a somewhat early ending came to the annual SACWN Valentine Dance.

The posted emergency instructions for the facility were followed but the phone numbers posted were not in service for the evening. By the time the management of the Society was reached, considerable time had passed and the problem was no longer just the bathrooms but floors flooded with sewer water.

The Unitarian management has expressed their regrets about this incident. The SACWN steering committee has tentatively scheduled a dance for May which will (uncontrollable circumstances aside) go to midnight.

Dancer left just as the "Rooter Router" person arrived. For the dance staff, it was just a typical night at SACWN!

LAMBDA CENTER DEDICATES LIBRARY ON MARCH 31, 1996 AT 2:00 P.M.

The Lambda Center recently moved to a new and larger building at 919 20th Street in Sacramento. Within this expanded facility, the area housing the gay and lesbian library will be dedicated on March 31, 1996 to Jayne Rountree in celebration of her life and contributions to the community.

The dedication was the idea of Marge Covino, a founding board member of the Lambda Center. "I spoke with Larry Hoover, the current President of the Board and he agreed that Jayne was the most deserving. I like the idea of naming the infrastructure of a building to a woman with such strength."

Marge recommended Jayne not only for her work in with lesbian organizations, but also for her activism in breast cancer awareness. "Jayne was willing to 'bare' it all. It's as if she has been our breast cancer poster child. I've been with Jayne at meetings when, to strike a blow for reality, she has stood up and said 'I am the face of breast cancer.' Jayne has stepped out behind the shadow of dying and helped us all look at our living. With her head bald from chemotherapy, she shouts to us to share our fears with the people we love. It is that strength we honor with the Jayne Rountree Library."

Jayne has been an initiator and advocate in the gay and lesbian community since relocating to Sacramento in 1985. She was a founder of CAP-PAC, a founder of Rainbow Realtors, a SACWN board member for many years, founder of Rainbow Campers, member of the Town Council and LGBA and an active supporter of the Lambda Center.

Marge notes, "Even as her health has been deteriorating, Jayne continues to advocate for women. At the Lambda Center, I am hoping to develop a "Hand to Hand" type program for women with cancer. Jayne continues to call me and explain what is needed at various stages of dealing with her illness. Whether it's a reminder that she'd like someone to cook her chicken soup, or the recognition of how wonderful it would be to have someone visit to read to her every Wednesday, Jayne is developing a model of involvement which will drive our program."

Jayne is delighted with this honor. "I am pleased that they are acknowledging me in my lifetime and in doing so recognizing the role that women have played in our community. There are so many deserving women that they could have dedicated the library to, but I'm thrilled that they are dedicating it to me. I want everyone I know to attend, so I can share this honor with them."

The dedication will begin at 2 P.M. on Sunday, March 31 and include a social hour as well as a program recognizing Jayne's activism.

Donations to the library are being accepted. Books should be about gays and lesbians or written by gay and lesbian authors. Financial contributions are also welcomed and will be used to purchased new materials.

SACRAMENTO AREA WOMEN'S RESOURCE AND YELLOW PAGES

There's a new publication in town and it's long over due. Many communities across the country have long had annually published directories of woman owned and "we want women's business friendly" companies. Sacramento joined those rank in January with the release of this new publication.

The publisher, Lisa Kohl, has made available free copies of this directory to SACWN members. Selling for $8.95 across town, members can obtain a directory free by stopping at the SACWN office (call first to make sure someone is available), at the upcoming March event or by mailing the postage costs ($2.16) to SACWN and a copy will be returned to you by mail.

In addition to the directory, Lisa is producing a series of "Affordable Seminars for Women". For information about upcoming programs, call the Lisa at the Yellow Pages at 553-4765.
